

Karlsruhochschule International University in Karlsruhe is an innovative foundation university with a cultural orientation. With its central idea of "ReThinking Management & Society", the University aims to make a critical contribution to traditional economic approaches. The "Karls" is characterized by room for debates and interdisciplinary exchange, for inspiration and playful exploration, for challenging and for thinking further: those who push their limits will feel right at home with us. And we hope that in so doing, you will enjoy challenging research and are keen to work with committed students.

Karlsruhochschule places special emphasis on the personal development of its students. Unique to our university is the approach to combine civic engagement with service learning. For the newly established Center for Civic Engagement and Responsible Management Education "Karls" won a significant government grant by the state of Baden-Württemberg.

Hence effective from January 2019 or later we are looking for a:

Professorship in Civic Engagement, Ethics and Service Learning

At Karlsruhochschule you will be part of an innovative and committed team shaping the university in its mission to provide responsible management education to future decision-makers. You will engage in applied critical teaching and research in the areas of your expertise, work with our international faculty and student body, and develop global academic partnerships. Your interpretative and qualitative approach is reflected in your publications. You naturally incorporate your own research into your teaching.

Our didactic approach is used to pursue interactive and constructivist teaching with case studies, role play, simulation, and project work. In this sense, innovative didactics and team teaching with colleagues and individual mentoring of students is your passion, and not a must.

We are looking for a part-time or full-time candidate with the following profile:

- Expertise in volunteering, collaboration with Volunteer Organizations and Global Active Citizenship in a national and international environment
- Expertise in delivering student groups trainings in embodied ethicality, intercultural competence and experiential learning
- Capability in coaching, professional empowerment, personal development
- Proficiency in train the trainer education in order to empower our own coaches as well as partner organizations
- Proven track record in impact research, quality assurance and curriculum development in formal and non-formal education

Can you see yourself in that role?

Are you able and willing, as a fluent or native speaker, to lecture in English and/or German? Do you hold a PhD or possess a specific ability to scientific research according to § 47 LHG Baden-Württemberg and can you build on a minimum of 3 years work experience outside higher education? Are you willing to collaborate in academic self-administration and, if required, to also assume responsibility?

If yes, apply by September 30, 2018, including proof of your academic and professional history and your salary expectations. Show us who you are! Please review the curricula of our study programs and let us know in which modules you would be interested to represent and what you can contribute. We are looking forward to your application, addressed by mail to Karlshochschule International University, Karlstraße 36-38, 76133 Karlsruhe or to academics@karlshochschule.de.
